World Heritage Site since 1994

A WORLD HERITAGE OF THE UNESCO

unique in every regard

Quedlinburg is a city filled with life, poised between the past and the future. Monuments from Romanesque times, 1,300 half-timbered houses as well as turn-of-the-century villas and art nouveau buildings breathe the history and culture of bygone eras. A contemporary art scene, drawn by a fascination with this unique ambience, sets its own counterpoint to the past. As early as 1994, the UNESCO underscored the extraordinary significance of the Castle Hill ensemble and the historical old city by adding them to its list of cultural monuments under its protection. With the Stiftskirche Saint Servatii (the Collegiate Church), the crypt of the Wiperti Church and the remains of the Marienkloster on the Münzenberg, Quedlinburg offers not only remarkable monuments that are highlighted as sites of special interest along the Saxony-Anhalt "Romanesque Road" but also the authentic scenes of important political, intellectual and cultural events from the era of the Ottonian emperors a thousand years ago. Famous artistic personalities who have left their mark on the city range from the 18th century German poet Friedrich Gottlieb Klopstock to the 20th century German/American painter Lyonel Feininger. The Lyonel Feininger Gallery presents the artist's works in accordance with chronological, thematic and stylistic perspectives and characterizes them further in terms of their intellectual and art historical context. Theatre and concert productions of the Nordharzer Städtebundtheater, the "Quedlinburg Music Summer" in the Stiftskirche, concerts in the festive assembly room of the town hall as well as in the Baroque Palais Salfeldt and in the Blasii Church are but a portion of the wide spectrum of events to be enjoyed in Quedlinburg. Special highlights, such as the "Day of the Open Monument," the "Pro-Vinz Art Festival," the "Kaiserfrühling" (an annual re-enactment of the spring assembly convened by the Ottonian emperors) and the special pre-Christmas offerings of Quedlinburg as "Advent City" draw many guests every year. In addition to these events, exhibitions in the museums, galleries and artists' ateliers are also attractions for the visitor.

LYONEL FEININGER GALLERY

The Collection of Dr. Hermann Klumpp

"One thing I know already:
I am giving mankind a new perspective"
Lyonel Feininger 1914

Lyonel Feininger, who spent fifty years in his elective homeland Germany, represents, without a doubt, one of the most remarkable personalities amongst 20th century artists. He maintained close ties with artists of the "Blue Rider Movement" and was later to teach in the Bauhaus in Weimar and Dessau. The Lyonel Feininger Gallery in Quedlinburg is a museum for art of 20th and the 21st centuries, its holdings enriched by one of the world's foremost collections of Feininger's graphic work along with numerous water-colors, drawings and several paintings by the artist. In addition, it houses a comprehensive collection of works from the "Classical Modern" period.
